Hinduism "in which the cosmic functions of creation, maintenance, and destruction are personified or transformer," These three deities have been called "the Hindu triad" or the "Great Trinity", often addressed as "Brahma-Vishnu-Maheshwara."

Jesus is the founder of Christianity, religion that knows him as the Messiah of the Hebrew biblical tradition and as God made man. Jesus is the son of God and the Virgin Mary, who lived as a Galilean Jew, was crucified under Pontius Pilate, and rose from the dead. Even for many non-believers, Jesus is a source of wisdom.

As per Buddhism, Gautama Buddha is the Founder. Gautama Buddha explicitly denies that the universe had a start by the act of a creator deity, refuses to endorse any views on creation and states that questions on the origin of the world are worthless.

As per Sikhism Guru Nanak Dev (1469-1539) is the Founder, first of the ten gurus. In Sikhism, a guru is the descent of divine guidance to mankind provided through ten Enlightened Masters. Sikhism is a strictly monotheistic religion. God is the creator, sustainer and destroyer. The goal of Sikhism is to end the cycle of transmigration (samsara) by merging with God.

As per Muslims Allah is the Founder. Muslims believe that God is one and incomparable and the purpose of existence is to love and serve God.
