Subject: Re: 2D Pearson correlation coefficient Posted by David Fanning on Fri, 31 Jan 2014 01:46:13 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Craig Markwardt writes:

>> I wonder if someone have a suggestion about how to determine the wi (weighting) factor.

>

> If you don't know, then 1 is the only safe weighting factor.

Really!? My first, completely off the cuff answer (unvoiced, fortunately) was "Geez, just throw the I Ching!" But, I wonder, quite seriously now, whether a normalized distribution of random numbers isn't functionally equivalent to using 1. I don't know the answer. But, I presume you do. :-)

Cheers,

David

--

David Fanning, Ph.D.
Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.
Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: http://www.idlcoyote.com/
Sepore ma de ni thue. ("Perhaps thou speakest truth.")