Subject: Re: assign an array to an element in another array
Posted by Matthew Argall on Fri, 20 Mar 2015 16:42:46 GMT

>  There is almost always a better way to do what you want, rather than piecing together variable names.

Seconded. You can just create 6xN array, then access any row you want without all the trouble of naming them

```
;Create an array
array = randomu(seed, 6, 100)

;Pick a row
iRow = 4
theRow = array[*, iRow]
```

"iRow" is essentially the name of your row...