
Subject: Re: No 8.4.1 or 8.5 release announcement
Posted by Haje Korth on Mon, 10 Aug 2015 17:12:04 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Ah, more good news. I thought the days are already accounted because Linux 32-bit support got dropped already a year ago. I am not going to panic then. :-)

On another note, installed anaconda python on windows and the new python bridge worked from the get go without errors. Well done!

On Monday, August 10, 2015 at 1:09:04 PM UTC-4, Chris Torrence wrote:

> On Monday, August 10, 2015 at 10:45:40 AM UTC-6, Haje Korth wrote:

>> Hi Chris,

>> I received my license file one hour ago and just finished the install. This is when I noticed that the 32-bit executable is still available. I was previously looking at the available downloads and the release notes file. Glad to hear this. To plan ahead, do you know when 32-bit Windows support will be discontinued entirely?

>>

>> Thanks,

>> haje

>>

>

> Hi Haje,

>

> Well, I don't want to speculate (but I will!). We have a lot of customers who still rely on some of the 32-bit only libraries. I imagine it will still be several (2+) years before anything happens. But again, that's just a guess on my part.

>

> -Chris
