Subject: Re: Clipping woes with hardware fonts...
Posted by Liam Gumley on Tue, 01 Jul 1997 07:00:00 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Richard G. French wrote:
>
> I am having a problem with clipping. As I understand it, XYOUTS has > clipping turned off > by default, but setting NOCLIP=0 should turn clipping back on and > prevent text from > being written outside the plot axes. I've discovered that this works > fine as long as you > use Hershey fonts, but it does not work when you use hardware fonts.

I tend not to use the hardware fonts on-screen because they cannot be rotated - it makes Y-axis labels look pretty crude. Usually one of the Hershey fonts suffices, and when I want to make hard copy, I use one of the Postscript fonts.

I realize that's not much help: sorry.

Cheers,
Liam.