To follow on my own mail...
VNI tech support have cracked it for me. The setup doesn't seem to create the license file properly, leaving out the feature line. Just a case of a manual hack into the license.dat to put in the line, and after that kicking in the license manager and everything seems okay.
So if anyone installs on 2.3 and can't get going, this may be the problem.
Thanks VNI tech. support :-)

Another post on minor problems here...
If you have a GX graphics card, or other 8 bit device, there can be an interesting problem if you run an AnswerBook in the same session as Wave. A by-product of them ransacking the available colours is that when you quit OpenWindows the console displays white on white...

You can type blind and get back into OpenWindows okay, but a better solution seems to be to power up using openwin -nobanner. Set this in the .profile and it seems to get round the problem.

Thanks to Sun Tech. Support for suggesting this.
