Every time I see something like this I'm transported back to 1961. I'm sitting in a barber chair getting my hair cut when the barber says to the customer sitting next to me, "I see that piecost out to the zoo escaped yesterday."

"Yeah", the customer says. "That's too bad."

"What's a 'piecost'?, I ask.

"About a buck-fifty," the barber says to me while the two old men yuck it up. I think they had been sitting there reading Playboy magazines all afternoon waiting for me to show up. :-)

Cheers,

David

Goddard Space Flight Center (web site: <http://www.gsfc.nasa.gov.>), a large NASA research center in Greenbelt, Maryland, a suburb on the east side of Washington D.C. I don't know about IDL 5.5 (my group has received the CDs, but we haven't installed it yet), but earlier versions of IDL have mixed very well with GSFC. I'm afraid it'll be kind of big to install on a single PC, though.

(Sorry, I couldn't let this one go by. :-) Actually, I have no idea what msg124 is talking about... possibly the IDLASTRO library?)
