I knew that allright :-(But I am ashaimd not, becose I think that for this group IDL syntax more valueable is.

So, this is how one can make others used to his English - see! Just stick around long enough :-) Uh, I do that all the time still. But what can you do with a language such primitive as English: no matter where you lay your objectives, you'll get wrong with "the"s and "a"s anyway. One British professor once revised my paper and added at least 200 "the"s to it, after it was passed by at least 3 Americans.

BTW, I never got the windows on Unix to not pop back. I gave up on Unix as platform inferior to Mac :-) Cheers,
Pavel

Pavel, you always brighten my day. :-)

Cheers,

David
