I am attempting to call an event handling procedure for a draw_motion_event that is called 'read_pixel'. I need to include a parameter, 'pointer' in my call, but idl does not recognize 'read_pixel, pointer' as an acceptable call:

IDL:> Attempt to call undefined procedure/function: 'READ_PIXEL, POINTER'.

Here is my line that calls the procedure:

IDL:> widget_control, data, event_pro = 'read_pixel, pointer'$
, Draw_motion_events = 1

I think you forgot to run it through the Babelfish translator, Reimar. (Or maybe you did run it through, and that was the problem. I can't remember.) In any case, we didn't care for the answer. :-)

Cheers,

David

P.S. My favorite question from newbies (and I don't think Kevin falls into this category) is the one that asks how to do such-and-so and then lists 25 mutually exclusive criteria the answer has to meet. Sigh...

Hmm, I know sometimes the grammar is wrong.
But my answer contained source text.

That should be understandable in each language.

David, danke f         den babelfish Tip! ;-)

No, No! We speakers of the Queen's English would forever be correcting all those Americans who seem to have had the "u" key surgically removed from their keyboards... ;-)
