Hi there,

My petty client changed his mind and has asked me to integrate one individual widget inside another one. The main one used to have a button that would bring the secondary in a different floating widget. However he now wants me to integrate the secondary into a widget_tab in the main one. The thing is that I am wondering if it could be possible to integrate the widgets (each one has a file with event handlers and widget construction commands) with minimum changes and keeping them in separate files. I just don't want to have huge files and try to reuse the code as much as I can.

If anyone has a clue, advise will be highly appreciated.

Cheers,
Juan
