

---

Subject: Re: 255 and 0

Posted by David Fanning on Sat, 12 Jun 2004 19:24:33 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Adhara writes:

- > I know for sure that my bitmap contains ONLY zeros and 255s. However,
- > when I try to transform this bitmap into a Tif image, the result shows
- > 238 and 226 as well! How is this possible?

It's not possible. :-)

How do you "know" your bitmap contains only zeros and 255s?

Are both your bitmap AND your TIFF files 2D image arrays?

- > I was suggested to scale
- > the values, however, this is still happening...

There is absolutely no point in scaling data that is already scaled into the range you want.

- > Can someone help me..???

Probably not without collecting an eye of a newt or something. I think your computer must be possessed. :-)

Cheers,

David

--

David Fanning, Ph.D.

Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.

Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: <http://www.dfanning.com/>

---