When I click on your link or search for that article number, I get:

"The tech tip you requested is not available."

So do I now. The damn thing was there this morning. Anyway its information content was nil.

The cynic in me would think that RSI noted this thread and quietly pulled the article to fix it without even acknowledging it and offering to post an answer after your questions were clarified. The optimist in me thinks the RSI website is, as it seems to so often be, temporarily broken.

Is this what you're looking for?

Yes, thats it. Thanks, Rick.

Cynicism is unjustified, as it turns out. I had also written to RSI email support, not expecting much. They just now acknowledged the faulty article in a very friendly email and promised to come back to me with a proper answer next week. Didn't say that the tech tip was withdrawn, though, but I guess it was a good idea (bit embarrassing for them, as you'll agree if you look at the link you gave me).
