If this is just for your system and not portable, and your system has
'wget' or 'curl' installed, I would use them and the SPAWN command, and capture the output. Not sure what to do on Windows. This would be easier than using SOCKET.

If you have IDL 6.4 or later, you can use the IDLnetURL object. See this Tech Tip from the ITTVIS website:

@ mankoff

no my product needs to be portable and i need to use the default IIS ftp which is provided with windows....

@jeffnettless4

well i already know about the IDLneturl in 6.4 but to my badluck i'm using idl 6.3 and can't ask them for an upgrade..

@all

any other ideas or suggesstions would be appreciated..

Thanks & regards
