Folks,

I've had a picture of myself on a spiffy new Dutch bike on my web page for a couple of weeks now.

<http://www.dfanning.com/>

But today I got two e-mails about it, which is about, gosh, two million percent more e-mails than I have ever gotten about a picture before. Laurens de Groot took issue with the fact that I could be riding such a "lame" bike in Holland, of all places. But then he saw another one just like it near where he works. He jumped out with his IDL books (alas, not mine, or he would be on the front page with me) and took a picture of it and him.

Two e-mails!? Could be the start of something big. People around the world posing with dorky bikes and IDL books. I'll post them, if you send them in. :-)

Cheers,

David
