My GUI has two tab(A,B).
In 'tab A' it generate a picture and draw it in tab B. After draw the picture in 'tab B',I would like GUI select 'tab B' as current active tab automatically, I try some method but it doesn't make sense,is it possible to achieve this function? Thank you very much!

Best wishes,
Rongchang

David,Thank you very much!
By the way, when 'IDL Programming Techniques 3rd Edition' will publish? I want to buy one.

Best,
Rongchang

When I get all the boys out of university. Unfortunately, at least two of them are heading to graduate school, so it probably won't be Real Soon Now. :-(

Cheers,

David

P.S. Let's just say if I had known those boys were going to turn out like their Dad and spend their lives in school, I might have tried harder for girls. I've been trying to match a few of them up with Andrew Cool's daughters and let him take over the financing, but so far no interest. :-(

I'm not actually paying for graduate school, but I do find they turn up a little short at the end of some months.
I don't mind seeing them suffer some, but I do hate to see them starve. They are good kids and working hard. :-)

Cheers,

David

David,

There's a word for that - pedophilia.

But seriously, here in Oz you don't pay to go to University, up front that is.
There's a scheme called Higher Education Contribution Scheme (HECS)
under which you are billed when you graduate, and you pay back a certain percentage each year from your salary as a newly minted professional, once you earn over a certain lower limit.

It does mean you start out with a whopping great debt hanging over your head that can take forever to pay off.

However, from age 17/18 when you enter Uni to 26 when you walk out with your PhD under your arm, all you need do is feed and clothe yourself, and make some beer money via part-time work.

Which means many students still live at home.

It could be another 18 years before the youngest Dr Cool flies the coop, which is a sobering thought. :-(

UK has a similar system now has a similar system to HECS too. However, you must be a resident for a certain number of years. There are a number of exceptional cases. I recall some silly exception if you were the son of a member of the house of Lords.
