Not sure about New Zealand, but have you had a look at some of the Trails in Tasmania? The Cradle Mountain National Park has some amazing treks. The conditions should be good, although it can snow anytime of year. I was there on Boxing day one year and we had snow! (That's in the height of summer in these parts for all you northern hemispherites).

The Tarkine and Styx Valley are also well worth a visit.

Humm. I love Tasmania. One of my favorite memories is rafting a river outside of Hobart there. But, New Zealand... That's where my heart is at the moment. :-)

Cheers,

David

David,

with the rugby world cup final on in Auckland on the 23rd of October, you might find that flights are substantially cheaper if you go the following week. Especially if Australia somehow get to the final despite the routing we gave them last weekend ;-)

Enjoy the trip if you do go, I'm very envious!

Chris
