Subject: Re: MEAN function not working properly.
Posted by David Fanning on Wed, 29 May 2013 17:48:24 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Martín Garay-MacLean writes:

> I am trying to use the mean function, in idl 8.1, with the NAN keyword. However, when I run it, it gives the error that the NAN keyword cannot be used with the mean function. I understand this was a problem before 7.1, and that it should not be happening in 8.1

>

> I checked the mean.pro file, and it does in fact have the NAN keyword in it. Hve anyone run into this?

You are finding a MEAN function from somewhere else on your IDL path. To locate which one you are using, type this:

IDL> Print, File_Which('mean.pro')

Remove that one, or rearrange your IDL path directories, to get it sorted out.

Cheers,

David

--

David Fanning, Ph.D.

Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.

Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: http://www.idlcoyote.com/

Sepore ma de ni thue. ("Perhaps thou speakest truth.")

Subject: Re: MEAN function not working properly.
Posted by on Wed. 29 May 20

on Wed, 29 May 2013 18:04:14 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Wednesday, May 29, 2013 1:40:40 PM UTC-4, Martín Garay-MacLean wrote:

> I am trying to use the mean function, in idl 8.1, with the NAN keyword. However, when I run it, it gives the error that the NAN keyword cannot be used with the mean function. I understand this was a problem before 7.1, and that it should not be happening in 8.1

> >

>

> I checked the mean.pro file, and it does in fact have the NAN keyword in it. Hve anyone run into this?

Thank you very much. Problem is solved.

Martín
--------	--