I am updating the value for a widget label using `widget_control` and `set_value`. The string length for the label varies, so I add the `/dynamic_resize` keyword to the widget label. The issue with this is that every time the widget label updates, the window jumps back to the centre of the screen, which is irritating. It seems like reloading the value for this widget somehow refreshes the entire widget base, which has the keyword `'/center'`. Is there a way to suppress this?
