  Short answer: Yes.

  Some details:

  I've been using IDL 4.0.1 on NT 4.0 for the last couple of weeks without any big problems.  However, at RSI they told me that IDL had not been released for NT 4.0 specifically.  I haven't noticed any problems though.  (Other than that nasty long name business, which will hopefully be resolved in IDL 5.0.)

  Since coming from the Unix world, I have noticed that sessions will "lock up" far more frequently on my PC vs. Unix.  This is usually while doing widget programming.  But I don't know if this is an IDL4.0.1 on NT4.0 problem, or a PC problem in general.
